NEW MIGRATION PROJECT

Preventing Bias in Your Community

An Interactive Workshop

For American-born, immigrant & refugee community members

“I liked the whole thing, particularly the last element: what we can do to help. I think that’s very helpful, very powerful. It just takes a little bit of courage.”

“I’m going to make it my goal to educate others.”

– Workshop participants

Respect, acceptance and safety are values that need be protected in every community. It is the responsibility of every community member to ensure those values by reducing bias and intolerance for one another. Through interactive activities and dialogue, participants will better understand their own biases and stereotypes, while walking away with specific tools and action steps to reduce immigrant and refugee bias in their communities.

Community Conversations

Talk. Listen. Learn.

“This dialogue really opened my eyes to what people think of me and gave me a chance to teach people about my culture, my beliefs and my views.”

“I think that there should be more conversations like this because it helped me to voice my opinion in a more positive way.”

The Community Conversation Series

Join us for an honest, friendly discussion about issues related to culture, nationality, race and religion. These open dialogues help create understanding of our cultural differences and similarities, reduce bias and stereotypes, and build relationships between American-born residents and new immigrants and refugees.
